

APRIL 2008

MEDIA VIOLENCE

JAMES GLEDHILL

DEBATING MATTERS
TOPIC
GUIDES

www.debatingmatters.com

MOTION:

“PEOPLE NEED
PROTECTING FROM
VIOLENT LYRICS, FILMS AND VIDEO GAMES”

CONTENTS

Introduction

Key terms

The media violence debate in context

Essential reading

Backgrounders

Organisations

In the news

KEY TERMS

Censorship

Desensitisation

Media effects

Moral panics

Murder music

Video nasties

INTRODUCTION

1 of 7

NOTES

1
1
2
4
5
5
6

What impact does media violence have on the way people act? Does exposure to violent music lyrics, films and video games lead to aggressive and violent behaviour? It's a debate that won't go away, as the reaction Ref: [BBC News] to the launch of Grand Theft Auto IV shows. And it's a particular concern of politicians, as in the wake of headlines about gun and knife crime both Gordon Brown Ref: [Sun] and David Cameron Ref: [Independent] referred to violent video games in calling for greater social responsibility. While it may be too simplistic to suggest a straightforward copycat effect linking what people see or hear to what they do, many scientific studies have raised concerns about the effects of media violence, particularly on vulnerable and impressionable young people. Such evidence forms the basis of arguments for censorship, with measures ranging from bans on violent material, to the cutting of scenes from films and the classification of films and video games by age limits. The game Manhunt 2 has been banned Ref: [BBC News] and the government's Byron review recommended that more games be rated. Campaigners for freedom of expression oppose such restriction and dispute the claim that media has a direct effect on behaviour. They argue that it's not the job of the authorities to decide what's in people's own good. Are some people susceptible to the influence of violent media and in need of protection? Or can we depend upon people being able to differentiate between fiction and reality, so that they should be left to decide for themselves what music they listen to, films they watch or video games they play?

Does media violence cause real violence?

New forms of media have always aroused concern. The arrival of video in the 1980s led to the 'video nasties' row and new censorship laws Ref: [Screen Online]. Such reactions have been seen as moral panics, but there have been prominent cases in which violent media have been blamed for tragic events. After the murder of James Bulger in 1993 it was pointed out in court that the ten-year-old killers had been watching violent videos such as Childs Play 3. After the 1999 Columbine High School massacre in the US it was claimed that the teenage killers were influenced by the game Doom, and video games again came under scrutiny after the 2007 Virginia Tech shootings. Grand Theft Auto previously caused a sex controversy Ref: [BBC News] and along with Manhunt has been linked with murders. In addition, rap music has been alleged to glamorise gun culture Ref: [Observer], and Jamaican dancehall music – dubbed 'murder music' by its critics – has been accused of inciting homophobic violence.

What does the science say?

This is hotly disputed. There is little consensus in the scientific literature about whether violent media leads to aggressive or violent behaviour. In those studies that claim there is a link, there is no agreement as to exactly how it works. Part of the problem is agreeing on a definition of what constitutes media violence. Then there's the problem of disentangling the influence of media from that of other factors. Underlying the debate are different media effects theories that take different views on the way people engage with media. At one end of the scale, the so-called 'hypodermic needle' model portrays audiences as passive and easily influenced by the media. The media directly 'injects' its message into the audience. This has been challenged by new audience theories such as 'reception analysis', which focus on the way audiences construct their own meanings out of the media, rather than simply accepting the meanings they're given.

Are video games like Grand Theft Auto a major threat to the moral health of society?

This was the charge levelled by Hillary Clinton in 2005, when she suggested that violence, and in particular the demeaning portrayal of women, has a desensitising effect Ref: [The Times]. Exposure to violence in the media, it is argued, makes people less able to empathise with the suffering of others, and therefore more likely to act violently towards them. This could be especially pronounced in the case of video games in which players take the role of an aggressor. But the authors of the book Grand Theft Childhood disagree, suggesting that many children use games to vent anger and relieve stress. Sceptics say blaming media violence is simplistic and ignores complicated social factors. The results of experiments should be treated with caution since people behave differently in the laboratory, freed from normal restrictions on behaviour, than in real life.

Can violent song lyrics increase aggression or even incite murder?

Some evidence has linked violent lyrics with aggressive behaviour Ref: [New Scientist]. Gay rights campaigner Peter Tatchell has led a campaign to stop 'murder music', arguing that some lyrics 'encourage, reinforce and legitimise' homophobic violence. He argues for a restriction on free expression in order to prevent the incitement of violence against lesbians and gay men. Opponents of restrictions argue that this stretches the definition of incitement beyond credible limits, as there is no clear causal link between listening to such music and acting violently. Much of the debate revolves around how we should treat things that some people find offensive: as a potential danger to society, or as something to be tolerated in the name of free expression.

THE MEDIA VIOLENCE DEBATE IN CONTEXT CONTINUED...

3 of 7

NOTES

ESSENTIAL READING

Shoot first, ask questions later?

Darren Waters BBC News 23 August 2006

Head to head

Marc Saltzman 1Up 2 June 2005

FOR

Video games ratings face overhaul

BBC News 27 March 2008

Don't shoot: Why video games really are linked to violence

Amanda Schaffer Slate 27 April 2007

Call to cut media violence

mediawatch-uk 23 February 2007

Does game violence make teens aggressive?

Kristin Kalning MSNBC 8 December 2006

When it's not OK to say anything

Peter Tatchell Guardian Unlimited 7 July 2006

AGAINST

I'm game for Grand Theft Auto. You should be too

Catherine Bennett Observer 4 May 2008

Grand Theft Childhood and the case against media sensationalism

Adam LaMosca The Escapist 29 April 2008

Classifying the classifiers

Darren Waters BBC News 27 March 2008

The new 'free speech' apartheid

Brendan O'Neill Guardian Unlimited 6 July 2006

Violence on the brain

Graham Barnfield spiked 17 January 2006

IN DEPTH

The myth of media violence

Andrew O'Hehir Salon 17 March 2005

Senator Clinton's speech to Kaiser Family Foundation

Hillary Clinton The Free Radical 8 March 2005

Policy statement on media violence

American Academy of Paediatrics 1 November 2001

Ten things that are wrong with the 'effects' model

David Gauntlett NewMediaStudies.com 1 January 1999

4 of 7

NOTES

BACKGROUNDEERS

It's just a game, says man behind Grand Theft Auto

Mark Macaskill interviews Leslie Benzies The Sunday Times 27 April 2009

Is technology ruining children?

John Cornwell interviews Susan Greenfield The Sunday Times 27 April 2008

Byron Review: the industry responds

Keith Stuart Guardian 27 March 2008

Byron Review released

Aleks Krotoski Guardian 27 March 2008

Are children safe in the digital world?

BBC News Have Your Say 27 March 2008

At a glance: the Byron Review

BBC News 27 March 2008

Safer children in a digital world: the report of the Byron Review

Tania Byron Department for Children, Schools and Families 27 March 2008

Is it wrong to blame hip hop?

Chris Summers BBC News 13 November 2007

State of play: Violence and video games

Margaret Robertson BBC News 13 August 2007

Whatever happened to the 'video nasties' row?

Iain Hollingshead Guardian 15 October 2005

My life of porn and violence

Mark Kermode Observer 19 September 2004

Explained: censorship in the UK

Sean Clarke Guardian 13 March 2002

Freedom of expression in the arts and entertainment

American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) 27 February 2002

News you can use on kids and violence

Diana Zuckerman National Research Centre for Women and Families

Grand Theft Childhood

Lawrence Kutner and Cheryl Olson

Media violence fact sheet

The Free Expression Policy Project

ORGANISATIONS

British Board of Film Classification (BBFC)

Campaign for Press and Broadcasting Freedom

Mothers Against Videogame Addiction and Violence (MAVAV)

Office of Communications (Ofcom)

Pan European Game Information (PEGI)

Video Game Voters Network

5 of 7

NOTES

IN THE NEWS

Man stabbed in queue for Grand Theft Auto IV
The Times 30 April 2008

Grand Theft Auto receives acclaim
BBC News 29 April 2008

'Grand Theft Auto' still driving critics nuts
Chicago Tribune 27 April 2008

Bid to censor violent films fails
BBC News 29 February 2008

Manhunt 2 release saga continues
BBC News 25 January 2008

Gordon Brown's blitz on blades
The Sun 14 January 2008

Cameron wants crackdown on violent films to curb crime
The Independent 29 August 2007

Victory for gay rights campaign as reggae star agrees to ditch homophobic lyrics
The Guardian 23 July 2007

German gamers face jail for acts of virtual violence
The Guardian 12 December 2006

Violent video games 'desensitise' players
Daily Mail 17 August 2006

PM under pressure on video games
BBC News 25 January 2006

Judge blocks law on violent games
BBC News 23 December 2005

Violent video games alter brain's response to violence
NewScientist.com 12 December 2005

6 of 7

NOTES

No strong link seen between violent video games and aggression
University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign 9 August 2005

Sex controversy over GTA game
BBC News 11 July 2005

Hillary opens up morality war on violent video games
The Sunday Times 27 March 2005

Can a video game lead to murder?
CBS News 6 March 2005

Violent song lyrics increase aggression
New Scientist 4 May 2003

Police hit at rappers for making guns glamorous
Observer 5 January 2003

ABOUT DEBATING MATTERS

Debating Matters because ideas matter. This is the premise of the Institute of Ideas & Pfizer Debating Matters Competition for sixth form students which emphasises substance, not just style, and the importance of taking ideas seriously. Debating Matters presents schools with an innovative and engaging approach to debating, where the real-world debates and a challenging format, including panel judges who engage with the students, appeal to students from a wide range of backgrounds, including schools with a long tradition of debating and those with none.

DEBATING MATTERS
TOPIC
GUIDES

www.debatingmatters.com

FIND OUT MORE

Debating Matters engages a wide range of individuals, from the students who take part in the debates, the diverse group of professionals who judge for us, the teachers who train and support their debaters, and the young people who go on to become Debating Matters Alumni after school and help us to continue to expand and develop the competition. If you enjoyed using this Topic Guide, and are interested in finding out more about Debating Matters and how you can be involved, please complete this form and return it to us at the address below.

Debating Matters Competition
Academy of Ideas Ltd
Signet House
49-51 Farringdon Road
London
EC1M 3JP

- Yes, I'd like to know more. Please send me further information about the Debating Matters Competition:
- I am a teacher and would like further details about events in my area and how to enter a team
- I am a sixth form student and would like further details about events in my area
- I am interested in becoming a Debating Matters judge
- I am interested in sponsoring/supporting Debating Matters
- Other (please specify)

First name

Surname

School/company/organisation

Professional role
(if applicable)

Address

Postcode

Email address

School/work phone

Mobile phone

“TEENAGE CITIZENS
THINKING DEEPLY
ABOUT...SOCIAL ISSUES”

IAN GRANT, CEO, BRITANNICA

